

Jefferson Digital Commons

Center for Teaching and Learning

jdc.jefferson.edu

- ✓ Maximize the impact of your publications
- ✓ Reach new audiences
- ✓ Appear in Google and other search engines
- ✓ Create and manage your own electronic journal

Meets Open Access Standards

WHAT IS THE JEFFERSON DIGITAL COMMONS (JDC)?

- DATABASE OF FACULTY PUBLICATIONS -- Both full-text and descriptions
- UNIVERSITY PRESS for journals, reports, lectures, and conference proceedings
- DISSERTATION LIBRARY for Jefferson theses and doctoral dissertations (via UMI)
- LIVING ARCHIVE AND PUBLIC RECORD of Jefferson's intellectual output

HOW DOES THE JDC PROMOTE FACULTY PUBLICATIONS?

Most publishers allow scholars to deposit full-text copies of accepted articles on an institutional website soon after publication in a subscription journal.

Placing an article in the Commons allows ALL Internet users to read and download it for free. They can find your article using common search engines like Google.

Wider exposure leads to earlier citations and more citations than articles which are restricted to journal subscribers.*

*As studied by ISI and librarians in 2004

ALL FORMATS WELCOME

The Jefferson Digital Commons can accept:

- Word documents
- PDF files
- Images
- Video clips
- Sound segments
- Data sets
- PowerPoint files

PEER REVIEW PROCESSES

Easy-to-use technology allows you to set up and manage peer review of materials efficiently.

WHO MAY CONTRIBUTE?

- All Jefferson faculty
- Jefferson students
- Jefferson administrative units, departments, centers

Non-Jeffersonians may contribute articles to electronic journals or conference proceedings sponsored by Jefferson.

CTL Staff are available to:

- Demonstrate the technology
- Determine your rights or restrictions for contributing articles
- Upload your articles
- Describe your articles

FIND RESEARCH IN GOOGLE

Google Me!

You can now deposit your published articles* in one easy location. Let The Center for Teaching & Learning describe and preserve them and provide free access to the full article worldwide.

Your papers will appear in Google and other search engines, often months before traditional channels.

*Subject to publishers' contracts

For more information, contact:

Dan Kipnis, MSI
Senior Education Services Librarian
Editor, Jefferson Digital Commons
dan.kipnis@jefferson.edu
215.503.2825