Science Today in Verse

Hope Leman, Samaritan Health Services

I am feeling somewhat blue 'Cause seals are dying of the flu That is sad and what is more It's of a type not seen before And with Ebola you must make Efforts never hands to shake And always keep oneself quite clean Or find yourself in quarantine Turbines near the habitats Of various kinds of birds and bats Have an effect on birds adverse (And that on bats is even worse) Drug users, shows evidence, Have screwed-up brains, which does make sense Patterns of wounds and injuries Studied now for centuries Suggest humankind has not Been as kind as we had thought Life appears to have been quite dull Without a break to smash a skull A new drug has made some mice Thinner, which is very nice But may not get to you or me For going on eternity It is more probable than not For cops not to notice pot As preoccupied, they tend to think You are speeding due to drink Bowhead whales sing like birds Wake me up when they use words *
