"I appreciate very much the widespread publicity that I have gotten through the Jefferson Digital Commons. I am astounded that there have been over 19,000 requests for my article! I greatly appreciate the monthly email alerts with download counts. The library staff makes it easy to deposit materials (especially in terms of copyright review). This has provided a great venue for sharing my work with a global audience."

"Since [my] article was published in the JDC, I have received emails from around the world thanking me for publishing the article and telling me how it has helped their students or staff. Publishing in the JDC is also good for authors who want their works to be seen by individuals outside of those with subscriptions to specific journals. Widespread dissemination of knowledge helps promote better education in the health professions and should not be limited to only certain individuals."

Traci B. Fox, MS, RDMS, RVT
Assistant Professor, Department of Radiologic Sciences
Thomas Jefferson University

"As a researcher in sports injuries, I receive numerous national and international inquiries weekly from team athletic trainers, sports med clinicians, and even athletes themselves requesting manuscripts, digital art and tables published in subspecialty journals or textbooks. The JDC provides a portal through which we can share our research and presentations to an audience who might not otherwise have access. This is an incredibly powerful tool for spreading the word on what we do here at Thomas Jefferson University."
