KEY TO GREAT WRITING: REWRITING
One of the most challenging tasks for any writer is editing your own work. The latest edition of the excellent book “How to Write and Publish a Scientific Paper” includes a new chapter to help guide the process (pp. 269-275). The authors encourage writers to check their manuscripts for the 8 Cs—compliance, completeness, composition, correctness, clarity, consistency, conciseness, and courtesy. For details, plus checklists for editing your own work, check out the book (Scott Memorial Library 4th Floor Book Stacks WZ 345 D274h 2016).

3-MINUTE THESIS COMPETITION (3MT)
This spring Jefferson is hosting its first 3MT, a competition held in 600 academic institutions in 60+ countries. Students who are completing their PhD and have registered for the competition will have just 3 minutes to engage a panel of judges and the audience on their thesis topic and its significance.

All are welcome to attend the event on Wednesday, April 10, at 4 pm in Foerderer Auditorium, where 8 finalists will be competing for a top prize of $1,000.
