

Jefferson Digital Commons: Proving That Jefferson Is an International Phenomenon!

Interested in accessing publications about all things Jefferson? Look no further than the Jefferson Digital Commons, or JDC.

Provided by the Center for Teaching and Learning and the Scott Memorial Library, the JDC is an open-access repository of works authored by Jeffersonians. To date, the archive houses more than 10,500 assets and has garnered more than 2.5 million downloads from all over the world, illustrating our institution's extensive international influence.

JDC materials include conference posters, published articles, Grand Rounds, newsletters, journals, oral histories, yearbooks, items from the University Archives and Special Collections, teaching videos and student capstone presentations, among others.
