RESIDENT SUBSCRIPTION RATE FOR THE JOURNAL OF THE AMERICAN PSYCHOANALYTIC ASSOCIATION

Dear Editor:

As Editor of the Journal of the American Psychoanalytic Association, I am pleased to announce that our Journal is available to residents throughout the United States at the reduced subscription rate of $41.25. Our Journal has been newly expanded to 1200 pages, distributed among four quarterly issues. You will receive the most current clinical, theoretical, and empirical findings in psychoanalysis in our pages. The data are applicable to the broader areas of dynamic psychiatry in your residency. We welcome new subscriptions by any resident whose interest lies in this area.

CALL FOR PAPERS

Dear Colleagues:

My PGY2 group currently is experiencing the anxieties and rewards of beginning therapy with a variety of patients in such diverse settings as locked unit, open unit, emergency service and office visits. I have become interested in the dynamics of such first meetings and the expectations and emotions that the therapist brings into the session. I am soliciting anecdotal accounts of first encounters with patients, with the intention of publishing an anthology, tentatively entitled "At the Very Beginning." Contributions from all disciplines are welcome. Manuscripts should be double-spaced and range in length from two to twenty pages. Please submit completed manuscripts to:
