

POPULATION HEALTH MATTERS

An e-newsletter of Jefferson College of Population Health

A MESSAGE FROM THE DEAN

2019 has brought tremendous excitement and change to the Jefferson College of Population Health (JCPH). Of course, our 19th Population Health Colloquium was a standout event with over 700 attendees. I'm so appreciative of the speakers, sponsors, exhibitors, and attendees who made it such a huge success. We're already beginning to plan for 2020, and I welcome your suggestions about what you'd like to see.

Our academic programs continue to evolve and improve to meet the demands of emerging leaders and working professionals who want to expand their knowledge and application of population health. And our new, redesigned Population Health Academy now offers more flexible attendance options (3-day or 5-day) The Spring session begins on May 6, 2019, and there are a few spots left; if you are interested, please register soon!

We're excited about our new online Masters' degree in Operational Excellence \(OpX\), which prepares leaders to be effective agents of change within their organizations by equipping them with knowledge and skills to facilitate and lead system and process-level improvements. (will use graphic somewhere in email).

And finally, I'm proud to share with you the viewing our newly branded Population Health Matters e-newsletter. This new format is designed to help us communicate with you in a timelier manner. The e-newsletter will be sent out quarterly, supplemented by e-alerts that will provide you with concise updates and information as needed.

IMPORTANT: If you are a subscriber to the prior Population Health Matters newsletter, your subscription will automatically roll over. If this is your first issue of Population Health Matters and you are interested in subscribing to the new e-newsletter and e-alerts, please visit: <http://bit.ly/PopHealthMattersSubscribe>.

Thank you for your support.

Sincerely,

David B. Nash, MD, MBA