JDC Celebrates 10 years!

Do you remember what you were doing on January 13, 2005? Probably not, but on that date the Scott Memorial Library activated their institutional repository, the Jefferson Digital Commons. Yes, it has been a decade since the JDC hit the internet.

Growth has been steady

- Total published submissions: 9,458
- Total downloads: 2,080,039
- Total number of series: 159

Global outreach has been impressive

Let’s fire up the time machine and go back to see what was going on 10 years ago.

Assorted facts & events from January 13th, 2005:

- The largest hail reported on this day in 2005 was 0.75 inch hail in the area of Sibley, Louisiana.
- The number one single the week of January 8th was “Let me Love you” by Mario. It spent nine consecutive weeks at the top spot becoming his best-performing single.
- The highest gross domestic film was Star Wars: Episode III: Revenge of the Sith with over $380 million. Perfect timing for the December 2015 release of the next episode in the Star Wars saga.
- RSS was all the rage and newspapers were writing about it.
- Search for weapons of mass destruction ends in Iraq.
- John Cena defeated Kenzo Suzuki to retain his WWE US Championship.
- Astronomy Picture of the Day was of Infrared Trifid.
• The Dow Jones closed at 10,617.78.

Kudos for the first ten years of the JDC. Here’s looking forward to the next ten and beyond.
