DEAN’S COLUMN by Dean Thomas J. Nasca ’75

More than a year has passed since my appointment as Dean of Jefferson Medical College. As I reflect on the past “545 days,” I am struck by both the magnitude of external forces influencing medical schools and academic health centers, and the dramatic institutional changes Jefferson has undergone in the past 12 months. The chairs of each department and the deans of each administrative function have outlined the successes, challenges, and opportunities of their areas of responsibility in the Annual Report of the Medical College, 2002 (which will be available on the Web at www.tju.edu/jmc/annualreport/). These reports are the summation of the efforts of over 800 full time Jefferson faculty, over 2,200 Jefferson volunteer clinical faculty over our entire affiliated teaching hospital network, nearly 900 medical students, 700 residents and fellows, and over 3,000 administrative and support staff. It also details the outcomes of the educational efforts of our students, residents, and fellows, and the efforts of the faculty on their behalf. In this column, I will summarize major trends on the campus, and reflect briefly on the future.

The research efforts of the faculty continue to bear fruit of growth in size and scope. Five of our departments are ranked in the top 25 medical school departments in NIH funding: Dermatology (3rd), Microbiology (2nd), Orthopaedic Surgery (13th), Pathology (4th), and Radiology (22nd). These rankings, while measuring dollars, are a reflection of the highest level of peer review, and competition with scientists from across the nation in each respective discipline. The institutional ranking of 44th (an increase in funding and rise of 2 positions in the ranking) give credence to the growing recognition of Jefferson as a research oriented medical school. Indeed, as can be seen in the figure above, Jefferson’s basic science departments’ growth in research over the past decade moved the institution from the median of all medical schools, well into the top quartile.

Clinical departments have also seen growth in research, as measured by protocols approved by the Institutional Review Boards, as well as research funding. The clinical departments have grown proportionate to the growth of the national cohort over the past decade, resulting in a stable positioning above the median for all medical schools.

I interpret these data as evidence of success of Jefferson’s investment in the late 1980s and 1990s in research facilities and faculty. The investment was largely made in basic science departments and targeted clinical departments, and has born fruit. This success, coupled with the opportunities to reconfigure programs and departments in support of growth in research, caused the Ad Hoc Faculty Committee on Research Planning to recommend to the administration a strategy of investment in targeted areas for growth in translational and clinical research. These programs are expected to build on our successful programs in the basic sciences. Further, the faculty and administration believe that clinical care will be provided increasingly through access to research driven innovations in care. This trend is already present in certain clinical areas, such as Oncology, and will accelerate with the combined impetus of the heightened national emphasis on translational and clinical research, and the public’s access to information. Indeed, this recognition of the core importance of research to the clinical and educational enterprise is one of the underpinnings of the strategic plan for both the medical college and our partner, Thomas Jefferson University Hospital.

The educational programs of the medical college and the graduate medical education programs of the faculty and the university hospital have dramatically evolved over the past 12 months. The Curriculum, Student Promotions, and Graduate Medical Education Committees have been the focal point of efforts by the faculty, students, residents, and administration, as we create the excellence we all desire in our educational programs. Considerable revision of the undergraduate curriculum is but one example of the efforts of the faculty and students. Perhaps more important has been the significant enhancement of the educational culture, moving towards the Collegial Learning Environment we envision. Dramatic change in the second year curriculum, innovations in the fourth year, and ongoing evaluation of the first and third years are evidence of these efforts. Perhaps the most significant event, however, was the adoption by the medical students and the faculty of the Jefferson Shared Code of Professional Values. This Code is recited by the faculty and students during opening exercises, during the orientation program for each year in the curriculum, and at our annual curriculum retreat. This Code places, front and center, Jefferson’s values, our commitment to professionalism, and our commitment to the public we serve. At a time when medicine and medical schools are challenged by forces that may deter the embodiment of professionalism, we are working to build a crucible of compassionate education that nurtures the values of professionalism in the next generation of physicians, while rejuvenating and invigorating these values in our faculty. I believe we, students and faculty together, have taken the first step in this journey. The full text of the Jefferson Shared Code of Professional Values accompanies my column. I hope it stirs the fires of professionalism and volunteerism in you, as it does for me.

One external measure of the effectiveness of the efforts of the faculty and students in the remodeling of our educational programs is the desirability of a Jefferson education. Despite the national trend downward in applications to medical school, Jefferson received in excess of 7,100 applications, nearly 1 of every 4 students applying to medical school in the United States. When compared to other medical schools, the striking desirability of a Jefferson education is apparent. Parameters of academic preparedness continue to rise, and another outstanding class will matriculate in late August. Another measure of the effectiveness of our educational program is the results of the recent LCME Accreditation Site Visit. Jefferson received laudatory remarks for recent innovations in the curriculum, and Full Accreditation from the LCME.

The graduate medical education programs have been invigorated by the efforts of the program directors, the administration, and the faculty. Development of competency based curricula, attention to the environment and duty responsibilities of the graduate trainees, and sharing of innovations across programs have resulted in dramatic enhancements in GME programs across the institution. An example of this enhancement was the outstanding NRMP performance of our residency programs this past spring. With all positions filled in the match, each program was able to attract many of the most outstanding students on their list. Jefferson will receive its Institutional Accreditation Review from the ACGME this fall. We hope to demonstrate innovation and leadership in the implementation of the Core Competencies at that visit.

Jefferson University Physicians, the full time faculty practice plan, continues to mature as a multispecialty group practice. The faculty absorbed a doubling of their malpractice rates in this past fiscal year, and approved moving their insurance back to a self-insured vehicle. Approximately one dollar in seven in JUP now goes to pay malpractice insurance premiums. Despite this burden, the faculty has expanded innovative clinical services, and will continue to expand the patient base of the practice, and the university hospital. These clinical programs serve as the foundation for a sustained effort to enhance clinical and translational research programs, as well as provide the setting for state of the art clinical education of medical students, residents, and fellows.

Throughout this past year, based on the fertile soil of the efforts of our predecessors, the seeds of transformation to a nationally recognized medical school and academic medical center have been sown. During my short tenure as dean, 10 departments have seen a change in leadership. New stewards in Medicine, Surgery, Physiology, Family Medicine, Urology, Neurology, Neurosurgery and Radiology, as well as acting chairs in Anesthesiology and Obstetrics and Gynecology will energize these departments, and the institution. Our established chairs and the administration will provide mentorship and direction as a new generation of leaders seize the reins. Jefferson has appointed its first two women chairs, and chosen from both outside and within to identify Jefferson’s new leaders. We have not chosen a path of complacency. We have chosen the path of continuous search of excellence.

In March of 2002, the Board of Trustees approved the Strategic Plan for the college and university, and the associated building plan. Construction of facilities for expansion of parking, research, and state of the art educational facilities to provide the technology required for the next generation of physicians to learn our art, are essential components of this plan. We believe that successful implementation of this strategic plan and construction effort will permit the medical college to enter the upper quartile of all medical schools in research productivity; enhance the reputation of Jefferson as a research oriented university; augment and facilitate innovation and excellence in undergraduate, graduate and continuing medical education; and ensure our patients, students, and faculty access to the latest innovations in patient centered care.

Jefferson faces many challenges, and enjoys tremendous opportunities. The challenges of our litigious regulatory society, and the barriers of inappropriately low compensation for our services are more than counterbalanced. The compelling needs of our patients, the energy and altruism of our students, the steadfastness and determination of our residents and fellows, the commitment to excellence and discovery of our faculty, and the ingenuity and commitment of our administra-

Shared Code of Professional Values

“In entering the profession of medicine, and in teaching future physicians, we as students and educators recognize the implicit trust that patients and society have granted us. As such, we must commit to embodying the highest standards of civility, honesty, and integrity in all aspects of our personal and professional lives. This must include our interpersonal relationships, our academic pursuits, and our medical practices. We must treat everyone compassionately and respect and protect his or her privacy, dignity, and individuality.

“As part of the trust that society has placed in us, we must advocate for outstanding patient care for all people. Accordingly, we must always recognize those attitudes and values of ours that may influence our ability to do so.

“As medical professionals, we must also recognize limitations in our knowledge, skills, and self-awareness. Accordingly, we must accept our duty to provide and receive constructive feedback with the goal of improving our ability to care for our patients. This eagerness to improve is central to our commitment to excellence and personal growth, and will be the foundation upon which we build our practice of life-long learning.”

We, the faculty, students, administration, and alumni stand on the shoulders of the generations of Jeffersonians who have provided us a 178 year old legacy of excellence in medical education and clinical service. We aspire to build on that legacy, enhancing its breadth and depth. We have, and will enhance, a sustained, successful research effort of national and international significance. We are moving to a cutting edge leadership position in medical education at all levels. We will continue to augment the reputation of excellence that Jefferson enjoys in the care of patients in the tri-state region to that of a national reputation of institutional excellence.

We must, however, accomplish this transformation to a national institutional reputation of excellence in research, education, and patient care while maintaining that which separates Jefferson from other research oriented institutions.

We are creating a culture marked by the values of professionalism: Altruism, Respect, Compassion, Integrity, Collaboration, Commitment to Excellence, and Stewardship. We will enhance our long-standing commitment to patient centered care, that humanistic touch that lies at the core of our mission of service to the community. We will continue to value all who are part of Jefferson, even as we deal with the often harsh realities of our environment. We aspire to a collaborative learning environment marked by excellence and constructive accountability for all. This is, perhaps, our greatest challenge.

And, we will succeed.

ALUMNI ACHIEVEMENT AWARD

Charles Francis ’65 Earns the Association’s Highest Honor

The recipient of the Alumni Association’s highest honor was introduced by John Gartland S’44 at the alumni banquet:

We come now to the part of the program the Alumni Association holds most dear: the awarding of the Alumni Achievement Award of Jefferson Medical College—apogee, if you will, of our academic process. Tonight we so honor Charles K. Francis of the Class of 1965 (pictured on the front cover) who, by virtue of his professional achievements, has brought honor and distinction to Jefferson Medical College.

After graduating from Jefferson in 1965 and interning at Philadelphia General Hospital, Dr. Francis spent three years as a general medical officer in the United States Air Force. He spent the years 1969-73 obtaining his graduate education in internal medicine and cardiology on the Tufts University service at Boston City Hospital and on the Harvard University service at Massachusetts General Hospital. From 1973 to 1977 he was Assistant Professor of Medicine and Chief of the Division of Cardiology at the King-Drew Medical Center in Los Angeles. He was then lured back to the east coast and over the next 10 years held professorships in internal medicine at the University of Connecticut Medical School and Yale University School of Medicine. From 1987 to 1998 he was Professor of Clinical Medicine, College of Physicians and Surgeons, Columbia University and Director of the Department of Medicine at the Harlem Hospital Center. He assumed his present position as President of the Charles R. Drew University of Medicine and Science in Los Angeles in 1998.

Dr. Francis has been the principal investigator in 13 funded research projects and is the author of 136 papers, chapters, and abstracts. In addition to his interest in health services and medical effectiveness research, he has contributed in the areas of coronary artery disease in African Americans, thrombolysis in myocardial infarction, hypertensive heart disease, mitral valve insufficiency, AIDS-associated heart disease, access to medical care, health and public policy, and the advancement of health care for minorities. He is the recipient of several national awards and has held elected positions of leadership in national professional organizations.

He has served on the Board of Governors of the Warren Magnusen Clinical Center at the National Institutes of Health, and served as co-chair of the Working Group on Coronary Artery Disease in Blacks, and on the National Advisory Council of the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute of the NIH. He presently serves on the Advisory Committee to the Director of the NIH and on the Board of Regents of the American College of Physicians, and is a member of the Institute of Medicine of the National Academy of Sciences.

It is with great pride that Jefferson Medical College presents its Alumni Achievement Award lor 2002 to Dr. Francis.
Thomas Jefferson University awarded the honorary degree of Doctor of Science to James Bagian '77 at Commencement ceremonies in June. Dr. Bagian, who was celebrating his 25th reunion at Jefferson, is Director of the Veterans Affairs National Center for Patient Safety. He conceived the VA's comprehensive patient safety program, which focuses on prevention of medical errors rather than punishment as the cornerstone to improving patient outcomes. Utilizing prioritization techniques and root cause analysis tools, Dr. Bagian's system, which was launched in 1999, increased the number of reported medical errors by more than 30-fold and the number of "close calls" reported by 900-fold in the first year of operation alone.

For this work Dr. Bagian also received another important honor this summer: the Frank Brown Berry Prize in Federal Healthcare.

Bagian was chosen as the first Director of the National Center for Patient Safety in 1998. NCPS uses a systems approach to error measurement, and techniques designed to reduce avoidable injuries and deaths throughout the VA's 173 medical centers. With its systems focus and emphasis on “prevention not punishment,” the program is working to nurture a culture of safety.

Previously, Dr. Bagian served with the Environmental Protection Agency from 1995 to 1998 as Deputy Director, Regional and State Programs Division, Office of Mobile Sources.

From 1980 to 1995 he was a NASA astronaut. He took part in both the planning and provision of emergency medical and rescue support for the first six Space Shuttle flights. He also served as the Astronaut Office Coordinator for Space Shuttle payload software and crew equipment. In 1986, Dr. Bagian served as an investigator for the Space Shuttle Challenger accident. He has also been responsible for the development of the pressure suit used for crew escape and various other survival equipment used on Shuttle missions. A veteran of two space flights (STS-29 in 1989 and STS-40 in 1991), Dr. Bagian has logged over 337 hours in space.

Dr. Bagian is currently an Adjunct Assistant Professor of Military and Emergency Medicine at the Uniformed Services University of Health Sciences. He has been active in the mountain rescue community and has served as a member of the Denali Medical Research Project on Mount McKinley. He is an Air Force-qualified freefall parachutist, holds a private pilot's license and has logged over 1,500 hours of flying time in propeller and jet aircraft, helicopters, and gliders.

Special honors for Dr. Bagian include election to the National Academy of Engineering “for integration of engineering and medical knowledge in applications to aerospace systems, environmental technology, and patient safety” (2000), and the American Medical Association’s Dr. Nathan S. Davis Award for outstanding public service in the advancement of public health (2001).

William Harding Kneedler MD died March 21. He had taught tropical medicine at Jefferson, having earned his diploma from the London School of Tropical Medicine as well as his MD from the University of Pennsylvania. He also lived for many years in Thailand.

He was a world famous figure in the field of radiation oncology, with his major areas of interest being brain tumors and cancers of the breast, neck, and head. He developed a landmark study called the Patterns of Radiation Therapy Care which he led from 1974 to 1983. This study sought to determine how patients should be treated, and which treatments are most effective. In addition, he incorporated long-term follow up and quality of life parameters into his studies, which was an original concept for such studies 30 years ago. Dr. Kramer was a research scientist at the National Cancer Institute, as well as being a teacher and clinician. He was a recipient of gold medals from the Chicago Radiological Society, the Fletcher Society of the M.D. Anderson Cancer Center, Houston, TX, the American Society of Therapeutic Radiologists, and the American College of Radiology. Jefferson established an Annual Simon Kramer Lectureship in his honor. When he stepped down as founding chairman of his department in 1983, Jefferson named him a Distinguished Professor. He remained an attending physician at Jefferson until 1989 when he accepted emeritus status. He is survived by a son and a daughter.

Alumni Spotlight: George Adams '66

Jefferson Medical College turns its Alumni Spotlight on George L. Adams '66 whose professional accomplishments have brought honor and prestige to our medical college. This outcome is not unexpected since George Adams was the 1966 Class President for four years, took three prizes at graduation, and functions as Class Agent for the Class of 1966. His residency education in otolaryngology was obtained at the University of Minnesota, 1967-71. He was appointed an Assistant Professor in the Department of Otolaryngology there in 1973. He became Professor and Head of the Department in 1990 and remains in that position today.

George Adams is actively involved in both student and resident medical education. In addition, he has a primary interest in developing a multidisciplinary approach to the management of advanced malignancies in his area of interest. He has been a member of many prospective trials in head and neck cancer, many of which have become national prospective trials. He points out that, formerly, treatment for such malignancies seemed dominated by anecdotal evidence and personal experience, rather than by scientifically derived facts. With increased multidisciplinary prospective randomized studies now becoming the norm, it seems apparent that there are specific indications for certain modalities of treatment. Dr. Adams points out these indications now are becoming the standard of care for malignancies in his field of interest.

George Adams has received multiple funded research grants, and is either a member or chair of 13 head and neck research protocols. He serves as Surgical Co-Chair, Head and Neck Oncology Committee, Eastern Cooperative Oncology Group (ECOG) in the National Cancer Institute. In addition to about 200 scientific presentations in this country and abroad, he has published six textbooks and over 120 scientific articles and book chapters. He also serves as a guest examiner for the American Board of Otolaryngology. He belongs to the American Academy of Facial Plastic and Reconstructive Surgery, the American Academy of Otolaryngology-Head and Neck Surgery, the Triological Society, the American Head and Neck Society, the American Laryngological Association, and the American College of Surgeons. He served as President, Minnesota Academy of Otolaryngology-Head and Neck Surgery in 1985. He received the Distinguished Clinical Teacher Award from the Minnesota Medical Foundation and the University of Minnesota medical students in 1995.

George Adams proudly points out that, at the University of Minnesota, the otolaryngology residency program is recognized for its strong effort in producing academic otolaryngologists. As part of this program, a master's degree in otolaryngology, or a PhD degree, is required for completion of the program. Up to 35 percent of residents finishing this program have remained in academic otolaryngology. Several of these now serve as department heads at prestigious universities across the country and many others serve as junior faculty members or are in part-time teaching positions. George Adams notes that Minnesota's strong emphasis on producing otolaryngologists who will be productive in teaching and research was a department goal even before he became department head. Their residency program in otolaryngology is one of the oldest and largest in the country and soon will be celebrating its 100th anniversary.

Dr. Adams's department can point with pride to the number of research projects in which they have participated, particularly with the large amount of National Institutes of Health funding they received in the area of otitis media research. George Adams says his present goal is to continue to build, improve, and enrich the program in otolaryngology at the University of Minnesota. The interdisciplinary aspects of the program studies of otitis media in both children and adults, and in mechanisms of cancer development, chemotherapy prevention, and prospective randomized Phase 3 trials in the management of head and neck cancers are what continue to spur him on.

Dr. Adams, his wife, Donna, and their three sons enjoy the pleasures of Minnesota's many lakes. George Adams participates in competitive sailing in J22 sailboat racing and in the E Scow Racing Fleet. He also is a competitive cross country skier, ranking in the top 40 percent of men in his age group in the 30km race. Jefferson congratulates Dr. Adams on a distinguished professional career and thanks him for bringing honor and distinction to Jefferson Medical College.
The 54th Campaign

James W. Fox IV ’70, Chairman, Annual Giving

We are deeply grateful to the 3,351 alumni, postgraduate alumni, nongraduate faculty and friends who gave generously to the 54th Annual Giving campaign, raising $1,942,381 to advance the educational, research and patient care mission of Jefferson. Their philanthropy is an essential element of Jefferson's continued success, and we thank them most sincerely.

Once again, the President's Club, under the chairmanship of Benjamin Bacharach '56 and Jerome M. Cotler '52, was out in front. 598 Club members gave $1,074,416 or 55 percent of the total raised for Annual Giving. Our thanks go to the chairmen for their leadership and to the members for their support.

Our nongraduate faculty and their Annual Giving agent, David C. Levin MD, deserve our gratitude for their loyalty to Jefferson and their contributions to the 54th campaign. 147 nongraduate faculty members gave $150,089 to Annual Giving.

We are pleased to report that 293 of our postgraduate alumni (PGAs) gave $110,427 to the 54th campaign. We thank them for their support and their departmental Annual Giving agents for their time and effort. Congratulations to the PGAs from the Department of Dermatology and their agent Anthony F. Santoro D’00 for the greatest amount contributed ($20,250); to the PGAs from the Department of Medicine and their agents Mark G. Graham IM’81 and Francis X. Keeley IM'60 for the greatest number of contributors (60) for the second year in a row; and to the PGAs from the Department of Ophthalmology and their agent Edward A. Jaeger, Jr. OPH’64 for the greatest percentage of participation (29.7 percent).

At the heart of every successful Annual Giving campaign is a loyal, active and effective class agent system. Jefferson is fortunate to have Medical College class agents who deserve every one of those adjectives and we are grateful to all of them. Several classes and class agents have done a superb job this year and we would like to recognize them.

First of all, congratulations to the 10 Medical College reunion classes and their agents for raising $275,242 in honor of their reunions. The Class of 1957 and their agents Phillip J. Marone and Bronson J. McNierney took top honors for amount given for the third year in a row. They raised $90,489 for the 54th campaign. The Class of 1978 and their agent Duncan Salmon continued their long tradition of taking first place for the number of contributors with 94 donors. Percentage of participation is counted from the 50th reunion class forward. The 50th reunion Class of 1952 and their agent Jerome M. Cotler tied with the Class of 1954 and their agent John R. Patterson for first place with 67 percent participation. These classes and class agents deserve our gratitude and thanks for their devotion to Jefferson.

“Jefferson is an outstanding medical school, and we’re so glad to help future physicians benefit from its tradition of excellence.”

Dr. and Mrs. Jack Fink ’54

To Dr. and Mrs. Fink, Jefferson is a special place. As a student, Dr. Fink enjoyed learning from mentors and professors such as Thaddeus L. Montgomery ’20 and John B. Montgomery ’26. After marrying his wife, Janet, two days after graduation, and completing his internship at Abington Memorial Hospital, Dr. Fink returned to Jefferson for his residency in obstetrics and gynecology. Generations of students, in turn, learned from his teaching during clinics, and he now is Honorary Clinical Assistant Professor of Obstetrics and Gynecology at Jefferson. Son David M. Fink ’85 continued the Jefferson tradition and now practices obstetrics/gynecology in Delaware.

An obstetrician/gynecologist in Lansdale, Pennsylvania, for 40 years until his retirement, Dr. Fink is continuing his education with courses in history and English literature. His wife, who was a schoolteacher until her retirement, is a docent at the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts and The Kimmel Center for the Performing Arts, both of which are in Philadelphia.

Dr. Fink is a volunteer for Jefferson’s Alumni Association and a longtime member of The President’s Club, which honors Jefferson’s leading benefactors. Because he and his wife wanted to give something more, they contributed one of the largest charitable gift annuities that Jefferson has received. This enables Dr. and Mrs. Fink to receive a lifetime stream of income and to give Jefferson unrestricted support for medical education.

Dr. and Mrs. Fink, who have been honored for their philanthropy with membership in The Jefferson Legacy Society, enjoy the satisfaction of receiving significant financial advantages while helping future generations to benefit from Jefferson’s tradition of excellence.
