

ACPE and Jefferson Medical College Team Up on New Book

This book will be invaluable to young trainees about to enter practice and those contemplating a change in their current practice venue. However, since the future practice of medicine will be quite challenging, each chapter offers important take-home messages for physicians at every level of training and experience.

ACPE and David Nash, MD, MBA, FACPE, at Jefferson Medical College, have partnered to create a roadmap for clinicians. It's a practice primer called Practicing Medicine in the 21st Century. This book provides an overview of today's health care environment; addresses the major areas of clinical management, information management, financial management, risk management and practice administration, and provides some insight into upcoming challenges.

The 400-page book is divided into five sections:

- Clinical management
- Information management
- The practice environment
- Financial tools
- Practice administration

Authors for each area were chosen from ACPE's Graduate Medical Education network and content experts at Jefferson Medical College.

The book is ideal for program directors to use with their residents and includes an online "instructor's guide" for each chapter. This guide includes course objectives, a lesson plan, PowerPoint presentation, and an assessment instrument.

Practicing Medicine in the 21st Century

To order visit ACPE.org/Publications